

A FOOD COURT TO SLOW DOWN LUNCHTIME ROUTINES

By Livvy Houghton and Holly Friend

01 : 05 : 2019 Food : Hospitality : Retail

Beijing – Green Option, an online brand for salads and healthy food, has opened the food court as part of a wellness complex.

With bright interiors designed by Ramoprino, The Green Option Food Court comprises a café, restaurant, cocktail bar and patio all served by a central kitchen and bakery. The dining space is located in a multifunctional building that acts as a wellness complex, with a spa, yoga centre, clubhouse and office.

Located in bustling Beijing, the food court aims to be a meditative environment for citizens to detach from the urban noise of the city streets. Its cushioned seating and pared back surrounds are designed to decelerate the pace of lunch, encouraging customers to and enjoy their break with colleagues, friends or solo.

While rushed, at-desk dining experiences are common around the world, new restaurant concepts such as Green Option are reintroducing focus to the lunch hour.