Ireland – The mobile network has partnered with the remote island of Arranmore to transform its residents' lifestyles through better connectivity.

Until now, Arranmore's lack of connectivity has restricted societal and economic growth. The partnership with Three will help its community of 469 people to create new business and employment opportunities. The initiative is also part of the island's efforts to encourage its diaspora to consider returning home.

Building on Arranmore Business Council's work to establish Ireland's first offshore digital hub, and facilitate an effective remote working environment, Three has provided fast connectivity and bandwidth, as well as fitting-out the interior of the hub and installing new hardware. 'We believe this partnership will go a long way in helping to future-proof Arranmore and will make the island sustainable for the next generation,' says Seamus Bonner, a representative of Arranmore Business Council.
